

Apostrophes

The apostrophe has two primary functions:

- 1) to show possession of a noun
 - 2) to show the omission of letters

1) to show possession of a noun

- add 's to the singular form of the word (even if it ends in -s):

I drive near the president's house everyday.

I like James's car.

- add ' to the end of plural nouns that end in -s:

These are my sisters' dresses.

These are my friends' pencils.

- add 's to the last noun to show joint possession of an object:

We are at Todd and Anne's apartment.

Note: Apostrophes should not be used with possessive pronouns because possessive pronouns already show possession -- they don't need an apostrophe. His, her(s), its, my, mine, your(s), our(s), their(s) are all possessive pronouns.

Note: As a general rule, if the possessive noun is an inanimate object (not living, no causal agency) then no apostrophe is needed. There are exceptions to this rule, however.

Example: That is the door of the car. → That is the car door.

In the example, notice that the car does not need a possessive apostrophe because it is an inanimate object.

Directions: Change the “_____ of _____” phrases into possessive noun phrases using an apostrophe.

Example: That is the house of David. → That is David's house.

1) This is the shoe of the girl. → _____.

2) We are at the room of the hotel. → _____.

2) to show the omission of letters and to form contractions

- Apostrophes are used to show any omission of letters in a word.
- Apostrophes are also used to form contractions. A contraction is a combination of two words which results in a single word. The apostrophe is used where letters have been omitted. Contractions are common in speaking and in informal writing.
- Here are some examples of contractions:

Affirmative Contractions
